I have just seen a long list of the name of known brigateds, with the prices of red by Government for their capture, dead or

For Kitzos they offer 20,000 drachmas, and smaller sums for the others. I met yesterday at Nauphia, a hand of armed peasantry ringing the raw, bloody, glinstly head of a brigand whom they had slain, and there are in the fortress of that place twenty-six men condemned to death tor brigandage. The guillotine has at times been fearfully active, and the ruthless chapping off of the heads of nearly three the sand men in the prime of life, within the last quarter of a century, has shown both the zeal and the policy of the Government.

shown both the zeal and the policy of the Government.

Ine truth is, that during the list and second decades after the liberation of trecee from Turkey brigandage existed as a necessary consequence of the previous condition of the people. It was a social institution which no human power could suddenly suppress. But us the old Klepthes and wild Palikaris died out; as the piesantry had aside their arms and looked to Government for protection, as schools were established and order hegan to prevail, and human life to become sacall institution which no human power could suddenly suppress. Now, in all the islands, there is securify. In Attica and in the l'aloponess with there are not more than one hundred professional brigands. The immusity which these wretches have enjoyed is clearl-awing to the stupidity or the guilty comherty of men in power, probably to both needed but hold and resolute action to In needed but bold and resolute action to char the country of them in three months. The mement for that action has at last evidently come. The andacity of the brigands had reached such a pitch that there has been a howl of indignation through the piess and the country. A storm was gathering which no administration could affect to dispressal.

in our city, preserved in alcohol.

A White Man Paddied.—Our County Court was engaged during the past week in trying a series of cases, which culminated at the Fair Grounds. An ostler, by the name of Armstrong, was accused of attempting to poison a valuable mare belonging to Mr. Ad Young, and was ar rested and placed in our county jail. Refore his arrest, however, his captors lal treated him rather roughly, one of them paddling him severely Armstrong was first tried for an attempt to poison the mare, and the proof being insufficient to mare, and the proof being insufficient to make out a case he was acquitted. Then he (A.) brought auit against Byerly and Monroe, who he asserted had assaulted Monroe, who he asserted had assaulte lim, the latter having paddled him most severely. After hearing the testimon, and the arguments of counsel pro an eon, the jury assessed a fine of $30 an ien days imprisonment upon Monroe, the man who used the paddle. The trial of Byerly was put off for ten days, until Moroe a time of imprisonment would expire so that he could testify for Byerly.

A few days ago the holler of a steam thresher exploded whilst threshing grain on the farm of Mr. Dick Brown, in Meade county, acalding the engineer, Mr. Forater, very badly. Mr. Drury was thrown to the distance of thirty yards, alighting on soft earth, and was only slightly hruised on the cheek. He says a piece of the boiler struck him on the jaw. His head is bomb-proof. Several others were slightly wounded. lightly wounded.

A WISE CRISE—Which Knew its Own Mother.—An interesting case has just occurred in Baltimore, where a child was claimed by two women, each asserting herself to be the veritable parent. The evidence naturally seemed to the coart irreconcilable and contradictory. In this dilemma, the Judge—doubtless remembering a celebrated ancient example, but modifying it to suit the present era of enlightenment—directed two chairs to be placed at opposite ends of the courtroom. He then requested Mrs. Perry, one of the petitioners, to take one of the seats, and Mrs. Farrell, one of the respondents, the other. The child during the hearing had been standing upon the platform, at the side of the Judge. Judge Alexander then turned to the child and told it to go to its mother.

The child started down, but turned around and asked the Judge, "May I go to the mother I want? The Judge said, "Yes, my child," when she sprang forward, and threw herself in the arms of Mrs. Farrell, exclaiming: "This is the mother I want. INDIAN OUTRAGES CONTINUE

St. Lot.s, Aug. 8 The following proceedings of the Iudian Communication yesterday have been made public. It was agreed that General Suerman and Colonel Tappan, Commissioner of Iudian Affairs, should communicate with the officers and agents under their control, directing them to send runners to the Indians in the vicinity of their respective posts and agencies for the Northern tribes to meet the Commissioners at Fort Laramie at the full moon in September, and all the tribes south of the Platte river to assemble at Fort Lurned, on the Arkansas river, at the full moon in October. The channity goods now in transitu for the Cheyennes, Arrapahoes, and Camanches wen directed to be sent to the agent of these tribes, to await the instructions of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

The Board then adjourned, to meet in Leavenworth on Monday next, and then proceed to Omaha, whence they will ascend the Missouri river to the highest necessible point, confer with all the lediens they can meet, and examine lands for a Northern reservation.

Gen. Shermun telegraphed to Gens. Ilanceck and Augur in accordance with the above, and Col Tappan sent the same instruction to Superintendent Murphy ut Atchison and the runners of the Northern Agency. Gen. Sherman also instructs Gens. Ilanceck and Augur to confine their military operations pending the action of the commissioners to the protection of the routes of travel and settlements, and to Ilanceck he says, "Ito not invade the country seath of the Arkansas river except in jurist it of parties guilty of battleasts."

Water thus admitted to the soil con-

Water thus admitted to the soil contains a sensible amount of heat, which is arrested by it, and kept there to warm and stimulate the roots of plants.

Is it not clear, then, attentive reader, it at frequently sirring the soil does actually destroy weeds, moisten the soil, warm the soil, and manure it? The theory is rational and sustained by often repeated experiments. Every farmer may reatisfy himself by a little care and considerable observation, that the operation uriant crops during a drought while those on the hard surface of another may be perishing for want of moisture.

The air also contains other elements besides moisture. One of them is ammonis, which is exceedingly valuable to a crop, and it is sifted from the atmosphere by the tailing rain. When the surface of the field is fine, showers readily penetrate it, carry the ammonia down into the soil, and thus manure it by every rain that falls. The water passes along—the ammonia it contains touches minerals that are in the coft, and, dissolving portions of them, supplies the roots of plants with the food they need.

Were it not for the agency of ammonia, soile might abound in valuable minerals which would remain inactive, and crops upon them would fail to come to perfection. Thus it seems clear that are ping soils in a porous condition results in an actual mannering of them.
